Pursuant to your request, the purpose of this letter is to provide a legal opinion on whether or not the SDAO/Traveler's Commercial Crime Policy, as supplemented by additional Coverage Forms, and with specific endorsements, complies with the bonding requirements of ORS 198.220. As discussed below, it is my opinion that the policy complies.

The sample policy used for this analysis is the policy that was provided by SDAO to Tualatin Valley Fire and Rescue. My research and analysis has included discussions with Mr. Phil Hopkins of the Secretary of State's Audit Division, analysis of the Traveler's Commercial Crime Policy with coverages and endorsements, and a comparison of the provisions to standard Fidelity Bond provisions. I have also researched the statute for legal opinions and attorney general opinions, and consulted with legal counsel familiar with bonding requirements and the legal and technical distinctions between bonds and insurance products.

Mr. Hopkins confirms the opinions attributed to him by your e-mail of October 25, 2006, but clarifies that the state has not made an explicit finding of compliance with the statutory requirements. We have not conducted any legislative research, and do not believe such is necessary to provide this legal opinion.

Lastly, my research discloses that the policy provided by SDAO appears to be based on the copyrighted Insurance Services Office, Inc. form initially developed in 1982 and 1983. That form was developed to replace the Public Employees Blanket Bond, which was developed and last revised in 1958 by the Surety Association of America. Differences between the Bond form and the Crime Policy initially appear to be substantial due to the change in format; however, the differences are mostly minor. I do not find any general form requirement for statutory bonds in Oregon. Accordingly, a common law form is acceptable, but is conditioned on faithful performance of duty. The added endorsement for "Faithful Performance of Duty" accomplishes that requirement. In fact, West's Legal forms lists this policy under its forms for Public Official Bonds. In summary, it appears to be a modification or hybrid from the initial 1958 bond form, presumably intended to compete with bonding companies, and is in effect, a bond under the statute. Although not labeled as such, and with some minor modifications, the essential features are present.

The statute requires a bond or a letter of credit. No provision is made within the statute for insurance products, or hybrid products, so on its face the question is whether or not the statute requires strict compliance or substantial compliance. Cases and attorney general opinions do not provide any guidance, but the statute is not specific with reference to form, and no forms are required under other statutes. Further, the Secretary of State's Audit Division, through Phil Hopkins, confirms that the Secretary of State's office accepts the SDAO/Traveler's product as fulfilling the statutory requirements for bonding. The state has not, however, to Hopkins' knowledge, ever conducted a formal analysis of the product for compliance with the statutory requirement. The product does, through its coverages and endorsements, provide a faithful performance of duty standard, similar to a bond obligation. While there are distinctions between the enforcement mechanisms between bonds and insurance products in general, and the processes for payment by the insurance company to the insured, the effect of the added Coverage Forms and endorsements is to provide coverage similar to bonds. We are not aware of any legal opinions which either support or reject the product with respect to compliance with the bonding requirements of ORS 198.220, but the historical context suggests that the product is treated by legal publishers as a public official bond, despite its title.

Taking the above into account, an argument can be made that this product is a bond and strictly complies with the statute. It is my opinion, however, that the policy substantially complies with the bonding requirements of ORS 198.220, and that the statutory language requires substantial compliance, not strict compliance. Accordingly, the product complies with the statutory provisions of ORS 198.220.

As always, please feel free to call if you have any questions or concerns.

Sincerely,

JORDAN SCHRADER PC
